CALL FOR PAPERS

The BÆM Meeting on the Economics of Crime, Violence, and Conflict brings together researchers to present and discuss research on the causes and consequences of crime, violence and conflict, and on the policies and institutions that respond to them. We welcome both theoretical and empirical contributions.

We invite submissions on all aspects of the field, including but not limited to criminal behavior, policing, judicial decisions, prisons and reintegration, gender-based and domestic violence, political violence, and armed conflict.
